So wanted to be loyal to RegisterFly and stay with RegisterFly.
I'd be more interested if ICANN actually DOES pull their accreditation.
The lawsuit requests that Mr.
You also need to reply to any emails sent to you by that registrar and acknowledge that the transfer should go ahead.
Thanks for your honesty, and never miss you Wed.
As a result ICANN has issued two formal warnings to Registerfly to either clean up its act or face decreditation.
Give them a call and they will walk you through EVERY step you need to take to join the ever-growing Go Daddy family.
After authorizing the transfer, you will be asked the domain's Authorization Code.
Paul Twomey, President and CEO of ICANN said today.
I gave you my domain name to us with the understanding that the process might be timely, our Domain Services Team would be happy to assist you.
It seems this is just another step the 'new' RF support team has taken to make life difficult for their once-loyal customers.
I saw it after made my transfers in a rush.
Well that's just GREAT!
The two things which make me a customer of Bob's are the superb customer service.
I had renewed the domains in Registerfly months ago, but as the article above stated, the registrations went into the pockets of the Kevin Medina and my domains were left as "expired".
And you're right my friend, all you have to pay for is the phone call.
com, VietnamMemorial.
I renewed the domains, it supposedly went through ok and everything was fine until Registerfly began its meltdown.
When I became a GoDaddy.
EU registrar that failed all day long.
Registerfly support does not exist.

The Go Daddy Super Bowl commercials are lighthearted and entertaining.
Try ringing them as this seems to have a higher success rate than email tickets.
My time is much more valuable.
Aside from that you profit from this trend, what say you?
Allegations against Kevin Medina.
I came to GoDaddy, I would have chosen you and not the lame RegisterFly.
After reading Bob's blog, I made another attempt to transfer the remaining domains, however, it looks like RF has now locked all domains, and they can't be unlocked.
Seems that Registerfly would not send out the required authorisation code.
The main one was on the basis of observing an interview with Bob Parsons.
That said, I always recommend GoDaddy.
and has many domains with them and at Blue Razor.
Medina denied misusing company funds and accused Narusiewicz of using fraud to take control of the company.
"Terminating accreditation is the strongest measure ICANN is able to take against t RegisterFly under its powers," Dr.

They are THE ONLY registrar and host that I trust.
Seems like that time would need to be now.
Allegations against Kevin Medina.
They have the best products, the best prices, and the best customer service.
I'd heard that GoDaddy.
We proceeded with the transfer, paid our fees, only to get a response back from GoDaddy saying that we needed an authorization code from RegisterFly to complete the transfer.
I'd love the chance to meet him in person.
This seems to confirm rumors that a significant amount of customer data kept on Registerfly servers has been corrupted and lost leaving Registerfly management s scrambling to find a way to get it back.
The you-know-what is now rolling downhill and Enom is doing no better than Registerfly is.
Could GoDaddy be interested in acquiring the main bulk of the RegisterFly-registered domain names?
GoDaddy's customer service and interface are excellent.
What is outrageous is: If you go to Registerfly.
If true, that's at least some good news for Registerfly customers.
The former big boys deserve what happens to them.
We all know the best way to avoid customer service is provide to phone service.
Now, I just want to double check and make sure I'm understand this blog and the concierege correctly.
In contrast, the few minutes on the phone with GoDaddy support were worth every penny spent on the long distance call.
The lawsuit alleges that Mr.
I have already written to ICAAN and nothing has happened.
I can only imagine how many people without my resources were screwed over.
If yes, contact them to walk you through.
I use Go Daddy for everything that I do online, and they are the best across the board.

just as long as I can phone if I need to .
And trust is what my work is all about, because I run sites like Suicide.
If I can pay transatlantic phone costs to talk to the superb customer service folks at Bob's organisation .
However, the high level of service and lower prices at GoDaddy far outweigh the few extra cents a minute one may have to spend on support calls.
com for further assistance.
Yesterday I created an account with GoDaddy and transferred my domains.
And system problems to boot.
A few folks have already used you guys on my suggestion.
parts of their web site, primarily the domain control panel and especially the parts of that related to email, are incomprehensible and byzantine.
At least the trouble ticket system worked some of the time.
They said they can't help me until Enom fixes my whois etc.
Also, I truly dislike making payments by Visa Cards as Moneybookers is, i think, faster and more reliable.
Also the e-mails for approving immediate transfer when received from GoDaddy or ENOM started arriving shortly after the process was initiated at the new registrar.
EU domain registered.
We'll do what we can to help.
We all know the best way to avoid customer service is provide to phone service.
I have to say that your folks have done a good job.
Could the guys at GoDaddy help me in any way with MoneyBookers?
This happened in the first day when .

They also threatened that they may NEVER release the domains.

I got mad and read the article on ICANN.
I really hope that something gets done that will allow those of us in this horrible situation to get out of it with minimal losses.
losing money with every second that goes by.
I use Go Daddy for everything that I do online, and they are the best across the board.
I attempted the transfer to GoDaddy.
Not being a completely web savvy person, this is a bit confusing, I apologize for repeating things and asking silly questions.
maybe I'll see him some time.
just wait until RF Accepts the transfer or I have to put some information on my RF Account?
I will never use another service as long as your company maintains this level of integrity and fair pricing, and I recommend Go Daddy to everyone looking to register a domain.
I renewed the domains several times and Registerfly very quickly debited my charge account but never updated their info.
After all, I wasn't the only one to have problems with RF.
Thanks for your honesty, and never miss you Wed.
ICANN sent several emails to RegisterFly telling them to issue us our authorization code so we could transfer the name.
They dorked around so long that the domain got grabbed by some outfit in Japan.
still without resolving my issues.
At least the trouble ticket system worked some of the time.
Hours spent on the phone with their recently moved to India customer support yielded little help.
Done that way there will be no need to transfer them away from Registerfly.
